Searching for a Job in Tallahassee

Objectives

1. Become familiar with online and print job search resources specific to Tallahassee and Leon County.
2. Identify local employers and job opportunities.

Getting Started

Utilize the local phone book. One of the most reliable resources for finding a job in Tallahassee is the Blue Pages of the current telephone book. These listings include government agency offices, telephone numbers, and often, job lines. Yellow Pages online at www.yp.com can also be used. Use this information as a base, but do not stop there.

Expect to do some research. You can use resources such as those available in The Career Center Library, or review the resources listed in this guide. Not all of the information you need is probably in print or online so you might want to expand your research to include people resources!

Networking is another great way to learn about job opportunities in the area. If you have not created a LinkedIn profile, review the “Building Your LinkedIn Presence” guide at www.career.fsu.edu/Resources/Career-Guides to learn about networking.

Do not underestimate information from experts. Public employees, such as those in workforce assistance centers, have a lot of knowledge to share. Have conversations with these people and others you encounter in your search. They can often provide useful information if you listen and persist in your networking efforts.

Use the Internet. Computers are available at the Leon County and State of Florida libraries and in The Career Center computer lab, if you do not have one. Employers often rely on electronic means to disperse vacancies and other information. Check out the “Searching for a Job” guide for more information.

Do not be discouraged. You may hear other job-seekers speak negatively about job searching, but try not to let that discourage you. Their experiences may be a result of their own lack of research, preparation, or qualifications.

www.bop.gov (Click on “Jobs”)
1 (800) 347-7744
The BOP website provides job vacancy listings and job descriptions. Their staff includes accountants, chaplains, dentists, teachers, trainers, and recreation specialists, to name a few.

Non-Profit Organizations

Another term sometimes used for non-profits is “community-based organizations.” Many non-profits contract with government offices to deliver services and, therefore, operate largely on public funding. But, unlike the government, salary and benefits vary widely among non-profits. With smaller non-profits, compensation may be less competitive. However, depending on your goals, non-profits may be worth exploring. Examples of non-profits include:
TMH is a very large non-profit. Due to the volume of applicants, the hiring process is very position-focused. Unless you have a specialized medical skill, chances of success are highest when you respond to a specific, open position. Positions are advertised in the Tallahassee Democrat (http://tallahassee.gannettonline.com/careerbuilder/). In addition, interested individuals can find job postings and apply on the hospital’s website.

Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce

www.talchamber.com
115 N. Calhoun St., Tallahassee, FL 32301
(850) 224-8116

The Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce maintains a member directory of local area businesses. The directory can be used to search non-profits and other types of organizations. On the Chamber of Commerce website, look under the “Member Center” tab, and click on the “Member Directory” link.

Tallahassee Society of Association Executives (TSAE)

www.tallysae.org
PO Box 1139, Tallahassee, FL 32302
(850) 561-6124

Associations represent one of the largest industries in Tallahassee and employ people such as lobbyists, consultants, accountants, receptionists, graphic designers, and meeting planners. TSAE also maintains a job board on its website. Some resources are reserved for members only. Also, use the Tallahassee phone book or the Yellow Pages online at (www.yp.com) to locate associations whose purposes might fit your career goals.

Private Sector

There are many private sector employers in Tallahassee who provide work for hundreds of employees. Some major employers include McKenzie Tank Lines, Capital Regional Medical Center, Embarq, and Capital City Bank.

Additional Resources

Staffing Agencies
